

TYPHOID FEVER TUBERCULOSIS SCARLET FEVER All Found in City Milk.

"Typhoid fever is not the only disease for which the milk supply of the hospitals of the District is responsible, but it aids also in the spread of tuberculosis, scarlet fever, and several other diseases."

"The foregoing is a statement made yesterday by Dr. G. Lloyd Magruder, Dr. George M. Kober, and Emile Berliner, who have recently made a careful study of the mortality rate from typhoid fever in the hospitals of the District of Columbia, and its possible connection with the milk supplied to patients at these institutions. The statement was issued after the investigation had been completed."

From the Star, January 16, 1910.

With typhoid-infected milk supplied to the Washington hospitals, tuberculous milk widely sold, and scarlet fever prevalent, isn't it time for you to protect yourself and your family by using WHITE CROSS MILK?

Hundreds of families have started the use of WHITE CROSS MILK during the past month, because it is an absolutely safe milk.

PURITY GUARANTEED.

Every drop of White Cross Milk is heated and aerated with filtered air for OVER TWO HOURS at 140 degrees F., and we positively guarantee it to be absolutely free from disease germs.

We have spent $100,000 to give Washington a pure, safe milk supply. We have erected the finest milk plant in the world, with the best modern scientific equipment. You can have the benefit of our perfect facilities without any additional cost.

THE MODERN SYSTEM.

We treat our milk in the country, while perfectly fresh, bottle it by machinery, in sterilized bottles, with sterilized caps, ship it to Washington in our own cars, and deliver it to your door DIRECT FROM THE CARS.

Every hospital, hotel, lunchroom, and family in Washington should use White Cross Milk exclusively, for three reasons:

First: It is superior to unheated milk, because it is absolutely free from typhoid, tuberculosis, scarlet fever, and other disease germs.

Second: It is superior to milk pasteurized by any other process, because its milk ferments are not destroyed nor its digestibility impaired.

Third: It is superior to milk shipped to Washington and pasteurized here, because it is treated before the milk has deteriorated and become contaminated by the products of bacterial activity.

BEGIN TODAY.

Let us begin to supply you with White Cross Milk this morning. WHY SHOULD YOU RUN THE RISK of using infected, stale, or indigestible milk when we will supply you with the purest, safest, and most highly indorsed milk in the world at the price of ordinary milk?

We Sell at 9 Cents.

We also furnish perfectly Pasteurized Milk, treated in the same plant and delivered from our cars in the same manner.

Our pamphlet "Pure Milk" sent upon request.

B. & W. White Cross Milk Co.,

9th and N Streets N. W.

'Phones N. 1112-1113.

ENDS AFRICAN HUNT.

Roosevelt to Start Back with Vast Collections.

Ex-President Roosevelt, writing from Nairobi under date of December 15 last, has informed the Smithsonian Institution that its expedition under his charge has finished its work in British East Africa and is about to leave for Uganda. He states he has collected 8,463 vertebrates, a number of invertebrates, and many plants and photographs. The letter is as follows:

Nairobi, Dec. 15, 1909.
To the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution.
Sir: I have to report that the Smithsonian expedition under my charge has now finished its work in British East Africa and is about to leave for Uganda. The collections made in British East Africa include:

Mammals, large, in all... 520
Mammals, small, in all... 3,278
Birds... 2,784
Reptiles and batrachians, about... 1,200
Fresh water and marine fish, about... 250

Total vertebrates... 8,463
In addition the collections include a large number of mollusks and other invertebrates, several thousand plants, in the neighborhood of 2,000 photos, anthropological materials, etc. Very respectfully,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Up to date only a little more than a quarter of the collections enumerated in Col. Roosevelt's letter have reached the

UNCLE SAM TO STAND PAT.

Suit to Dissolve Railroad Merger Not to Be Withdrawn.

It may be stated upon authority that the government has no intention of withdrawing the suit filed under the terms of the Sherman anti-trust act to dissolve the merger of the Union Pacific and the Southern Pacific as a combination in restraint of trade.

The Attorney General now has the matter under consideration, but it is known that unless he changes his mind on the subject he will direct Special Counselors Kellogg and Severance to proceed with the case in the courts.

Dr. C. F. Winkler will deliver a lecture this evening at 1211 F Street on "The subversive mind."

YESTERDAY IN CONGRESS.

SENATE.
The Senate convened at noon. President's message on conservation read. Senator Gallinger offers bill creating a public service commission.

A number of amendments to District appropriation bill were submitted by various Senators. Resolution for investigation of Ballinger controversy passed as it was reported by conference. Judiciary Committee reports favorably on Judge Lake Strider's appointment.

Senators deliver eulogies to former Senator George S. Messersmith.

Following brief executive session, the Senate adjourned at 3:30 o'clock.

HOUSE.
The House convened at noon. House committee will investigate charges made against General Land Office by Representative Hitchcock.

Various District bills introduced. Bill admitting New Mexico and Arizona passed. Urgent deficiency bill was under consideration when adjournment was taken at 5 o'clock.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Washington, Monday, Jan. 17, 1910-8 p. m.

The temperature will rise Tuesday in the Middle Atlantic and North Atlantic States, followed by colder weather in these districts Wednesday. Colder weather will prevail in the Lake region, the Ohio Valley, and the Southern States during Tuesday and Wednesday. The weather will be warmer Tuesday in the Northern Plains States.

Storm warnings are displayed on the Washington Oregon coast. Heavy rain and strong winds are possible high, shifting winds have been issued for the Middle and North Atlantic coast.

Storms departing Tuesday for European ports will have brisk, possibly high, westerly winds, shifting to west and northwest, with unsettled weather and rain, followed by fair weather Wednesday and Thursday.

Local Temperature.

Midnight, 24; 2 a. m., 24; 4 a. m., 24; 6 a. m., 24; 8 a. m., 27; 10 a. m., 31; 12 noon, 35; 2 p. m., 40; 4 p. m., 41; 6 p. m., 41; 8 p. m., 39; 10 p. m., 38; Maximum, 42; minimum, 23.
Relative humidity—5 a. m., 75; 2 p. m., 68; 8 p. m., 56. Rainfall 8 p. m. to 8 p. m., 0.06. Hours of sunshine, 12.
Temperature same date last year—Maximum, 38; minimum, 22.

Temperatures in Other Cities.

Temperatures in other cities, together with the amount of rainfall for the twelve hours ended at 8 p. m. yesterday, are as follows:

	Max.	Min.	8 p. m.	Rain.
Asheville, N. C.	36	34	46	T.
Atlanta, Ga.	38	29	44	...
Atlantic City, N. J.	49	29	40	...
Bismarck, N. Dak.	16	12	6	...
Boston, Mass.	36	24	36	...
Buffalo, N. Y.	38	22	35	T.
Chicago, Ill.	49	32	40	0.08
Cincinnati, Ohio	48	32	48	0.12
Cheyenne, Wyo.	23	20	30	T.
Davenport, Iowa	39	29	38	...
Denver, Colo.	38	30	30	T.
Des Moines, Iowa	36	32	32	0.02
Galveston, Tex.	40	30	32	...
Helena, Mont.	34	25	32	...
Indianapolis, Ind.	42	39	42	0.38
Jacksonville, Fla.	48	42	36	...
Kansas City, Mo.	52	39	39	T.
Little Rock, Ark.	61	46	64	...
Los Angeles, Cal.	61	42	54	...
Marquette, Mich.	32	22	22	...
Memphis, Tenn.	61	46	62	...
New Orleans, La.	72	48	64	...
New York, N. Y.	40	30	38	...
North Platte, Neb.	30	20	28	...
Omaha, Neb.	34	25	36	T.
Pittsburg, Pa.	40	30	38	0.01
Portland, Me.	40	30	38	...
Portland, Ore.	46	34	42	0.01
Salt Lake City, Utah	30	24	28	...
St. Louis, Mo.	48	38	42	0.12
St. Paul, Minn.	34	28	32	...
San Francisco, Cal.	48	42	46	...
Springfield, Ill.	44	32	44	0.12
Tacoma, Wash.	42	42	40	0.34
Vicksburg, Miss.	70	50	66	...

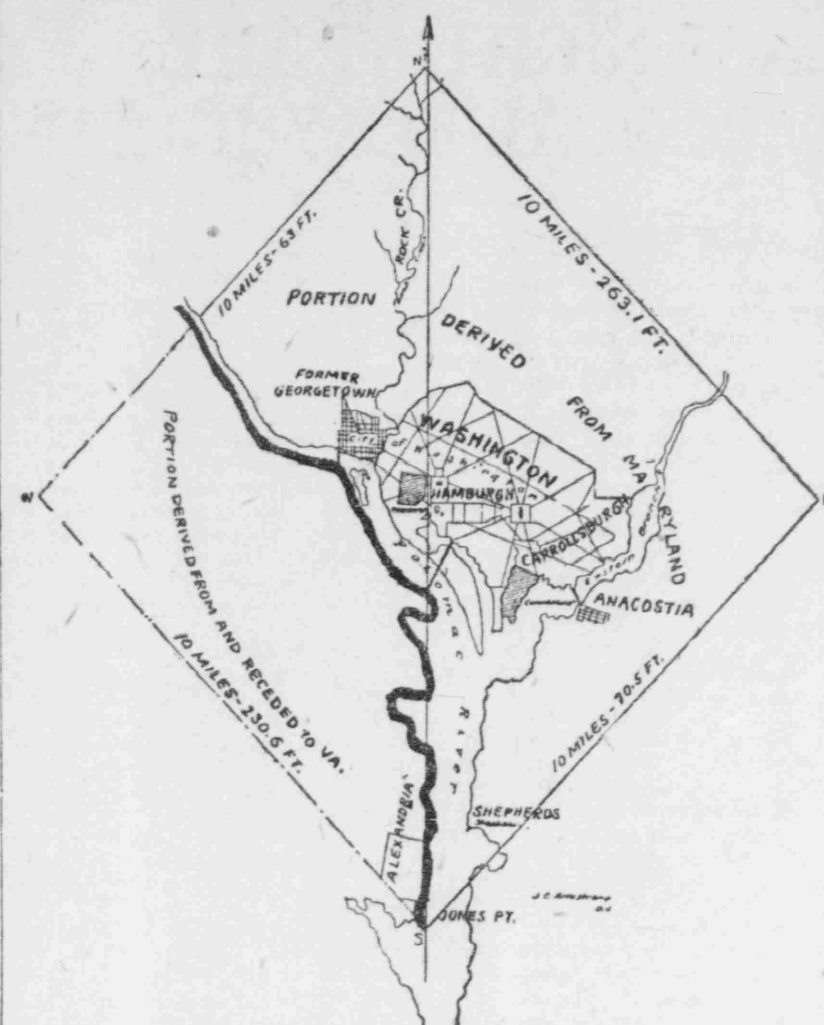

Tide Table.

Today—High tide, 1:37 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. Low tide, 7:38 a. m. and 8:29 p. m.

Tomorrow—High tide, 2:08 a. m. and 2:27 p. m. Low tide, 8:23 a. m. and 9:24 p. m.

Condition of the Water.

Special to The Washington Herald.
Harpers Ferry, W. Va., Jan. 17.—Both rivers clear.

Southwestern side, 10 miles 230.6 feet. Northeastern side, 10 miles 262.1 feet. Southeastern side, 10 miles 70.5 feet. Northwestern side, 10 miles 63 feet. For the second line; then from the terminations of the said first and second lines run two other direct lines of 10 miles each, the one crossing the Eastern Branch aforesaid and the other the Potomac, and meeting each other in a point.

DOES VIRGINIA OWN ALEXANDRIA COUNTY

Continued from Page One.

grave concern, for it involves in a technical sense title to the ground upon which this Capitol, the White House, and many other important public buildings stand. If the decision to Virginia stands in law it would seem possible that the Federal government retains jurisdiction over the portion of the District north of the Potomac in derogation of rights and at the expense of the State of Maryland.

Fever-breeding Marsh.

When artistic taste and solicitude for sanitary conditions combined to inspire the movement to reclaim the Potomac Flats, the progress of the work soon revealed the fact that proper treatment of the narrow river and adjacent marshes would always be limited and unsatisfactory as long as the Potomac Flats, a fever-breeding marsh within 1,000 or 8,000 feet of the White House, could not be regarded with indifference, nor can any one fail to observe the improvement on the north side of the river. In short, each year more amply justifies the wisdom of Washington and his commission in embracing both sides of the river within the limits of the Federal District.

The Capitol, the White House, and all the public buildings were located near the center in the beginning, but the fact of necessity moved the southern line of the District to within a short distance of the White House grounds. This was not intended by Washington, under whose masterful direction the constitutional design regarding a seat for the Federal government was executed.

Defeat of Intention.

The act revealing substantially two-fifths of the District to Virginia so obviously defeats the intention of the framers of the Constitution in this behalf and so ruthlessly disregards the rights of other parties that I have for years regarded it as null and void in general principles; but notwithstanding the interesting and important nature of the question, I have not found time to investigate the law and the historical facts bearing upon it. Last year, however, I had the good fortune to mention the matter to Mr. H. H. Taylor, known to the bar of the District as one of our leading constitutional lawyers, and that gentleman volunteered to examine the question and to write me his views upon it. Mr. Taylor's letter sets forth the constitutional provisions in question, and the law of the District, in relation to the subject, together with a review of all executive action and contract obligations in connection with the subject. The letter is a brief of such rare clearness and ability that I believe it should be made permanently available for the use of all who are interested in the subject, and that when printed the communication be referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia for consideration.

An Exhaustive Opinion.

Mr. Taylor's opinion, buttressed by historical references and legal citations, is exhaustive and comprehensive. He says, in beginning:

"The contemporaneous evidence puts the fact beyond all question that the final definition of a district ten miles square as the seat of our Federal government was in a special sense the personal work of the government. It was the work of the government, and the government alone, that acquired the title to the tract from three sources—the State of Virginia, the State of Maryland, and the State of Pennsylvania. That part of the heart of the present city which underlies the Capitol, the White House, and the Treasury, Washington's task was to induce the three parties who held the title to cede to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River, the Annapolis River, and the State of Maryland, and the thirteen local proprietors the grantees. The real consideration for such a grant was the right to the capital, the seat of government, and the right to the Federal government, without any direct pecuniary consideration, the entire area under a quadrilateral tract of land, bounded by the Potomac River